Product Description

Navegador, Board Game, for 2-5 Players, from 12 Years

In the 15th century, the Portuguese Prince Henry the Navigator (Henrique o Navegador) called together the best cartographers and sailors of his country to explore the coast of Africa. The experience gained in navigation and shipbuilding heralded the age of discoveries and finally made it possible to establish a sea route to India and China.

At the height of its power, Portugal controlled trade from Brazil to Japan and achieved immeasurable wealth with its spice monopoly. As enterprising trading dynasties, the players participated in the construction of the global Portuguese colonial empire. On the trail of the discoverers, they penetrate as far as Nagasaki, but unknown sea regions take their toll.

By founding colonies and building factories, the players create the necessary economic basis for their voyages of discovery. However, the prices of sugar, gold and spices are constantly changing, and only those who adapt to the market will be able to finance their high-flying plans. In the competition for new discoveries, colonies, cheap shipyards and churches, the actions of the players must be closely observed.
