Product Description

HMS Hood is a British battlecruiser of the interwar and World War II period. It was built in 1918 and commissioned two years later. It was 262.3 metres long. The cruiser's main artillery armament consisted of eight BL Mk I guns, 381 mm calibre. In the interwar period, the cruiser was the showpiece of the Royal Navy as the largest ship in the world. After the outbreak of the Second World War and the defeat of France, she was transported to Gibraltar, where she joined H Unit. On 21 May 1941, she set off on her final voyage in the company of the battleship Prince of Wales. Three days later, British ships collided with the German battleship Bismarck and the escorting heavy cruiser Prinz Eugen in the Danish Straits. After a short long-range artillery duel, the Bismarck's well-aimed missile caused an internal explosion in the Hood's stern, completely destroying the ship. Of the 1,418 crew members, only three sailors were saved. The sinking of the "HOOD" caused a tremendous shock in Great Britain.

The building block model of HMS Hood was designed in 1:300 scale and faithfully reflects the details of its historical prototype. The model is 88 cm/34.6" long and 22 cm/8.7" high. It has many moving parts, such as deck guns, rotating artillery turrets, rudders and propellers. The model has been given high quality prints that mimic equipment and camouflage. The prints will not wear off even with intensive play. The set includes a black display stand and a white sign with the model name and scale printed on it. The ship is sure to delight adults and younger history, military and seafaring fans. It will look great on a desk, bookshelf, office or in any building block fan's room.
