Product Description

It is over 100 years old and the oldest working vehicle in The Tank Museum. The Rolls Royce armoured car was built in 1920. A copy of the tank was used in Ireland, Shanghai and Egypt before returning to England to patrol the Norfolk coast during the Second World War. It entered the museum collection in 1947 and became an extremely important exhibit. In 1997, its passenger was Queen Elizabeth II.

Use a set of 267 COBI building blocks to build a realistically recreated historic car from The Tank Museum collection. The vehicle was designed in collaboration with the Tank Museum in 1:35 scale. Of particular note are the numerous details, durable, distinctive prints and the new blocks used. For the first time in the Historical Collection, Cobi has applied a new shade of green to match British vehicles! The model continues the series of vintage cars created using specially designed elements. The car is easy to build and modify. More experienced builders will easily use the available elements to create other versions of cars or trucks! The set includes a figure of a British driver with great uniform print.

This historic armoured car is a great gift idea, regardless of the age of the recipient. The set is perfect for collectors, automotive enthusiasts and younger history enthusiasts. It's also a great start to the adventure with the Polish COBI building blocks. Build a story, block by block!
