Product Description

In Evora, you take on the role of a builder in the 1st century and build the columns of a temple. The aim of the game is to collect the most victory points. You get these points by placing pillar pieces, by achieving majorities for individual pillars or by achieving majorities for the height of all pillars.

You take turns moving your piece around the building site and performing an action or drawing a card. Individual column segments are built through building site actions. How many and which column segments you are allowed to build is determined by the square on which you are standing. You all play on the same building site at the same time - so be quick so that no one else gets the majority of a column before you. During your turn, you can also play a card from your hand and use its effect. Some cards give you victory points, others let you build more column parts.

Caution: Not suitable for children under 36 months. Not suitable for children under 36 months.

The game is multilingual and contains the languages German, English, Portuguese and Spanish.
