Product Description

Only four rows, four columns and four squares, but an incredible challenge.

The rules of the abstract game Quantik are quickly explained: The goal is to be the first player to set up the four different shapes of a line, a column or a square area. In each turn, the players place one of their pieces on the board. It is forbidden to place a piece on a line, column or square where the same shape has already been placed by the opponent. The first player to place the fourth different shape in a line, column or zone wins the game immediately. The slim set of rules and the great wooden components of Quantik ensure long-lasting fun.

Also available as a practical mini version for travelling.
