Product Description

The M8 Scott is a World War II self-propelled howitzer based on the chassis of the Stuart light tank. The name M8 General Scott was sometimes used. The vehicle was armed with a 75 mm howitzer placed in an open turret. The welded armour was intended to protect the crew. About 1,778 vehicles of this type were produced from September 1942 to January 1944. The COBI model was developed to fit the 1:35 scale figures and consists of 525 building blocks. Features of the model include: Access to the replica engine, rotating turret, moving gun and working chain traction. All graphic elements are high quality prints. The figure shows an American soldier with the rank of captain. The set comes with a shield with the name of the set printed on it. This set cannot be missing in our 1:35 scale collection! Build history, brick by brick!
