Product Description

The Sopwith F.1 Camel is the most famous British fighter aircraft from the First World War. It was designed and built by the Sopwith Aviation Company. This aircraft gained fame due to its high combat efficiency and manoeuvrability. Sopwith Camel was allowed to fight effectively with German aircraft for supremacy in the air. Camel fighters shot down a total of 1,294 enemy aircraft during the war. By mid-1918, Camel fighters were becoming somewhat obsolete due to insufficient speed and poor performance at higher altitudes. They were thus intended for attacks on ground targets, they also served as support for infantry and harassed German ground troops.

This model is piloted by a figure inspired by that of William Barker. The Canadian is the most famous pilot of Sopwith Camels. The Camel he piloted was the most effective fighter in RAF history. Barker shot down 46 aircraft and observation balloons in one year of service!

The model made from COBI building blocks carefully recreates a historic aircraft from the First World War era in the new 1:32 scale. It has a movable propeller, ailerons and spinning wheels. High-quality prints perfectly reproduce the aircraft's historical markings. Stickers have been completely omitted! The solid construction makes it a perfect model for fun and display. The model includes a figure of a sensational pilot: Major William Barker, Ace RAF. Thanks to COBI building blocks, the legend of the great war has returned in a perfect edition. It is the perfect model for fans of aviation history, arousing admiration and attracting attention. It's impossible to remain indifferent to such a colourful set with a dash of history. No matter how old you are. This model is just for you! Create a story with COBI!
