Product Description

The Walker Bulldog is a light American reconnaissance tank designed to interfere with Soviet tanks during the Cold War. It entered service in 1951 and successively replaced the now obsolete M24 Chaffee. It was distinguished by good armour and speed. It was armed with the 76.2 mm M32 gun. Unfortunately, the engine, which consumed too much fuel, was very noisy, as were the tracks, which was undoubtedly a disadvantage of this vehicle. A total of 5,500 units were produced. The first combat mission was in April 1961 during the failed Bay of Pigs invasion in Cuba. Tanks were also found in Vietnam, where the advantage of the Soviet T-54 was felt. In 1965, the US government sold all the tanks to South Vietnam and other interested countries.

You can assemble the American M41A3 Walker Bulldog light tank from a set of over 600 COBI building blocks. The model contains elements covered with high-quality prints that will not wear out even with intensive use. The design perfectly reflects the original shapes of its historical prototype. Movable wheels and tank tracks, opening hatches, access to a block engine, a movable turret and a very characteristic barrel as well as two figures of American soldiers with accessories guarantee satisfaction with this set! The whole is rounded off by a sign with the name of the vehicle. The Bulldog completes the Vietnam War collection and is the perfect opponent for the Vietnamese T-54 tanks! This set is a must for fans of the military and the history of the Vietnam War. Build a story, block by block!
