Product Description

The JU-87 dive bomber is certainly one of the best known and most famous aircraft from the Second World War. This distinctive aircraft with pronounced bent wings gained great fame at the start of the war and, together with the Panzer divisions of the Wehrmacht, is considered a symbol of the Blitzkrieg. In the course of the war, new versions with different mission profiles were introduced. The Ju-87G was developed as an "anti-tank" version of the famous Stuka to counter the impressive number of enemy armoured vehicles on the Eastern Front after 1943. Famed Stuka pilot Hans Ulrich Rudel proposed two 37mm anti-aircraft 18 guns housed in under-wings to better counter this new threat. In this configuration, the Ju-87G "Kanonenvogel" proved to be extremely effective in the hands of experienced pilots. The G-2 version was distinguished in particular by an enlarged wing area derived from its predecessor, the D-5.
