Product Description

The medium low-wing BR 20 "Cicogna" was developed by the Italian aircraft manufacturer Fiat in the 1930s. It entered service in 1936 and was characterised by a metal frame and retractable landing gear. Modern and fast for the time, the aircraft was used by the "Aviazione Legionaria" and experienced its baptism of fire in 1937 in the Spanish Civil War. In September 1940, the "Corpo Aereo Italiano", consisting of the 13th and 43rd Stormo da Bombardamento, was also equipped with the BR-20. The Stormi were stationed in Belgium and supported the Luftwaffe during the Battle of Britain. Despite operational comparisons with modern R.A.F. fighters showing the limitations of the BR-20, it was used by several Regia Aeronautica bomber squadrons on various fronts throughout the Second World War.
