Product Description

The standing model in scale 1:72, is a recreation of the Roman infantry of the 1st century. The equipment of the 1st century legionary became the stereotype of the Roman infantry. Over his tunic he wore the heavy lorica segmentata, the most advanced form of body protection at the time. The characteristic rectangular "scutum" often bears the name or insignia of the legion to which the soldier belongs. The individual armament consisted of gladius and pilum, a heavy throwing spear.

Not suitable for children under 3 years. Choking hazard due to small parts.
