Product Description

A unique model of a very recognisable and still operational tank. PzKpfw VI Tiger number 131 was seized by the British during the Second World War and is now Bovington's biggest attraction, the Tank Museum! The building block Tiger 131 has been faithfully reproduced in 1:48 scale. It has movable elements such as: Turret and gun barrel as well as rotating wheels and tracks. The advantage of the set consisting of 350 elements is a solid construction that faithfully reproduces the original forms of its historical prototype. Our miniature tank has been covered with high-quality prints that do not rub off. The Museum Tiger 131 from Bovington completes our collection of miniature tanks in 1:48 scale. Thanks to our small series, your collection will find a place everywhere! Our tanks are perfect for adult military enthusiasts and anyone who loves history and construction, regardless of age! The Panzerkampfwagen VI, or Tiger, is a German heavy tank from World War II. Its distinctive shape is still recognisable around the world. The vehicle itself has become legendary and is still present not only in historical materials but also in pop culture. The first examples of the Tiger were delivered to the front near Leningrad and Tunisia in August/September 1942. Designed and manufactured by Henschel, the tank was very modern and efficient. Unfortunately, its production consumed enormous resources of valuable raw materials and time. The Tiger I tanks and the few Tiger II tanks had a significant impact on the course of hostilities. The infamous and proliferating Terror Tigers destroyed over 10,300 Allied tanks and 11,380 guns with casualties of 1,725. Caution! Not suitable for children under 3 years of age as small parts may be swallowed. Choking hazard!
