Product Description

The Huey® is an American multi-role helicopter that entered service in 1957. It is widely known from the Vietnam War, where it served as a transport, air support and medical helicopter. Many types of weapons were mounted on the helicopter, including a machine gun on the transport sides and, in the support version, 70 mm rocket pods without guidance and the M134 minigun rifles. 12 soldiers could board the helicopter.

From a set of COBI building blocks you can faithfully recreate the extremely popular American Huey helicopter in 1:32 scale. The model was released in the VIETNAM WARseries under the licence of the American manufacturer of transport and military helicopters Bell Helicopter Textron. The model, which is up to 39 cm long, features high-quality prints that will not wear out even with intensive use. The prints are characteristic of the US Air Cavalry and mimic the details of the equipment. The helicopter was equipped with rotating propellers and sliding doors. The set includes two figures representing a pilot and a soldier. The set is completed by a sign with the printed name of the set and the Bell logo.
