Product Description

The Patrouille Acrobatique de France is an aerobatic squadron of the French Air Force from 1946. The pilots of this elite team fly aircraft from Alpha Jet. The clamp brick model in the characteristic colours of the aerobatic squadron was developed in 1:48 scale under licence from Dassault Aviation. The model includes numerous prints and OPTIONAL decals to change the numbering of the aircraft. The landing gear of the aircraft can be easily removed as desired, for example to display the model. Simplified pilot figures can be placed in the hinged cockpit. The set includes a presentation stand to be built and a plate with the name of the model plus the emblem of the aerobatic squadron!

The Armed Forces series is designed for aviation, military and block model enthusiasts of the highest quality!

The Dassault Alpha Jet is a training aircraft for advanced training and a light attack aircraft. It was created through Franco-German cooperation and entered service in the 1970s. Single-seat and two-seat (pilot and instructor) versions were produced. The Alpha Jet was in service in France, Germany, Belgium, Portugal and Egypt, among other countries. It is still in use in France today.
