Product Description

The stationary model is a replica of the Ford Transik Mk. II. Transit is a series of light commercial vehicles manufactured by Ford Germany and Ford UK since 1953 and designed for the European market. The front engine of these vehicles allows for a lower loading platform, which facilitates the loading process. However, the very first Transit was produced jointly by the German and British Ford in 1965, explicitly requested by Henry Ford; this collaboration gave life to today's Ford Europe and the well-known MK I vehicle. In 1978 it was further redesigned and the MK II was born. In 1984, an aesthetic redesign was carried out on the front bumper and on the engine, which was a 68 hp diesel York with 2498 cbm. These vehicles were not only a commercial success in Europe, but are still produced today for non-European markets.
