Product Description

If you like tea, biscuits and modelling, you can't get around this classic British fighter plane. The 1:32 model of the Hawker Tempest Mk. V fighter from Revell impresses with its precise engravings and rich detail. Bring the English answer to German steel engines and retaliatory missiles to life on your hobbyist's table! The Hawker Tempest made the Axis engineers' hair stand on end during the Second World War.

With around 800 models built, the MK V of the Tempest series established itself from 1944 onwards as the most powerful fighter or fighter-bomber of the Allied powers. As one of the fastest fighters of the Second World War, the propeller-driven Tempest V was capable of competing even against the German jet fighter Me262.

It became famous as the "V1 fighter". With a top speed of up to 696 km/h, this fighter was able to track and shoot down cruise missiles before they could do any damage. Caution. Not suitable for children under 36 months.
