Product Description

The version G was the most produced variant of the PzKpfw V Panther and replaced the version A in production from 1944. The chassis had been designed more favourably and further improvements were continuously incorporated into production. Vehicles of the final version featured, among other things, a modified engine deck and a shape-changed roller cover. With its 7.5cm 42L/70 battle cannon and bullet-resistant moulds, the Panther proved to be a dangerous opponent. The V-12-cylinder Maybach HL 230P30 petrol engine with 700 hp maximum output enabled the 44,800 kg Panther Ausf. G to reach a top speed of up to 55 km/h. The crew consisted of five men.
