Product Description

The 2CV was presented to the public for the first time in 1948. With this purist, inexpensive small car, which was easy to maintain and simple to operate, Citroën offered a robust mass-produced vehicle for the people, which had extremely good suspension in keeping with the sparsely developed road network. From 1981, when the 2 CV had long since become a cult object, a two-colour version appeared in series production, the wine-red-black 2 CV 6 Charleston, which was followed from September 1982 by a yellow-black version, both equipped with an air-cooled 0.6-litre two-cylinder boxer engine and 29 hp output. According to the original the kit offers chromed hubcaps, the typical chromed headlamps as well as a multi-piece engine and of course a movable bonnet.
