Product Description

Casket - 61 Components

The cogwheel, which according to statements by Aristotle and Heron of Alexandria as early as 330 BC Chr. was used is a technical masterpiece of the drive. The interlocking teeth are not only form-fitting and slip-free, but also inspire with the transmission ratio to be transmitted. The UGEARS kit offers a post-modern gear drive casket which can be delivered to the technophile hobbyist in 61 components.

Each of these components is made of ecologically high quality wood and can be easily removed from a pre-cut template. Aside from the dexterity of putting it together, the still life pays homage to the gear-driven drive. The models by UGEARS are thus small works of art that place the character of retrofuturism on every desk. The box provided with a box can be equipped with business cards or other writing utensils, which are now mechanically seeing the light of day. In view of this, the semi-open design looks like a small masterpiece that is the focus of any tech-savvy interest. This style is called steampunk.

Warning! Not for children under 3 years.
