Product Description

The historical collection now also includes the Wunderwaffe, a miracle weapon that was to turn the tide of the war. The Messerschmitt Me 262 is the first jet-powered fighter aircraft to be used in combat! It was manufactured by Germany and entered service in 1944 as an interceptor. Bomber and reconnaissance versions were also produced. It was called the Sturmvogel by German pilots and was known as the Turbo by the Allies. Messerschmitt Me 262s scored 900 kills with the loss of 100 aircraft. Build a legendary German jet aircraft from the Second World War with 250 COBI building blocks! The block model features high-quality prints and a removable chassis. The aircraft is 23 cm long and has a wingspan of 26 cm and fits perfectly into our giant 1:48 scale bombers! Messerschmitt ME 262 is an easy to build model, perfect for a good start to your adventure with COBI building blocks. This is an aircraft that lovers of aviation, military technology and history should pay special attention to. Build history, brick by brick, with COBI!
