Product Description

"Freightliner Trucks, a long-established American company based in Portland, which operates in the commercial vehicle market and is now owned by automotive giant Daimler, is primarily known as one of the leading manufacturers of tractor units. However, one should not forget how widespread and successful Freightliners have been over the years for heavy-duty applications. In fact, the quarry truck market experienced strong growth in the late 1970s and early 1980s, which had an impact on the production volumes of the major truck manufacturers. Freightliner's designers worked on the best technical solutions for the demands of the construction market: reinforced chassis and rear axles for a higher load capacity, tipping platforms with high resistance, engines and transmissions optimised for demanding loads and steep inclines. Caution! Not suitable for children under 3 years. Choking hazard due to small parts.
