Product Description

The Tirpitz is a German World War II battleship launched on 1 April 1939. It is the twin of the battleship "Bismarck" and the largest unit of the Kriegsmarine in the years 1941-1944. It reached combat readiness in September 1941. It was sunk by the British Air Force on 12 November 1944 near Tromsø, Norway.

The EXECUTIVE EDITION collector's version of the battleship Tirpitz has been enriched with an exclusive figure of a German radio operator equipped with the famous German ENIGMA encryption machine. The set also includes two black description plates with the name of the ship and basic information about it. The signs are mounted on a stand. The ship model created by the COBI company was produced in 1:300 scale. It has almost 3,000 elements and is 84.5 cm long. Thanks to the use of the latest available elements and advanced construction techniques, the model faithfully reflects the proportions of the historic ship and retains all the essential elements, including the original, very characteristic camouflage. It features numerous movable parts such as propellers, rudders, rotating turrets and gun barrels that can be raised and lowered. Under the removable part of the deck we have access to the engine compartment. The set also includes a very sturdy and aesthetic black stand with a plate on which the name of the ship is printed. As this is a large and quite complex model, we recommend it mainly to experienced collectors and older, seasoned building block fans. It does not need to be glued or painted as its entire body and elements are made of COBI building blocks.
