Product Description

Whether as an agile transporter that brings the Skitarii quickly and safely to the place of deployment, as a fighter aircraft for penetrating ground attacks or as a devastating bomber that provides air support for the troops in the decisive phases - the Archaeopter has been supporting the Adeptus Mechanicus from the air for thousands of years. Unfortunately, the miniature is not made of malleable nanocarbon fibre fabric and therefore requires additional protection during transport. This is exactly what your Archaeopter model gets with this Feldherr foam insert. A large, precisely cut compartment accommodates the miniature aviator. The precise cut ensures that the Archaeopter lies absolutely securely in its compartment during transport and does not slide around. This reliably protects the wings and cannons from breaking off and other damage. The colours of the painted miniature are also protected from abrasion, scratches and chipping details. The flight base stand on the oval base has its own compartment right next to the flyer. Seven additional compartments are available for you to use and can be used to store miniatures, game material and other small parts. You can store Belisarius Cawl and similarly sized miniatures in the three large compartments, for example. The other compartments are ideal for Castellian Robots, Serberys or character models.
