Product Description

DSA Adventure - Jade Green and Cobalt Blue, paperback (DE), 48 pages

For millennia, the tribes of the forest people in the deep south of Aventuria have been waking up to ancient taboos and remote places some of which are terrible threats. One of these places is in the highlands of HRabaaal, where the glacier masses beneath Mount Karairi? Itir keep a long-forgotten danger at bay. Since the fall of the stars, however, many of these ban zones have been slowly disappearing, and only if the widely scattered tribes of the steaming jungle stand against it, many a catastrophe can still be averted.

The expeditions of the Horasian ethnologist Yalsinia ya Tarcallo, director of the recently founded Aves School of the Herzog Eolan University in Methumis, brings you closer and closer to the secret of ancient prophecies, which foresaw the impending danger and gave the shamans of the forest people the means to treat it to encounter. But dark forces try to thwart the shaman's plan, and the cunning Alanfan explorer Notia Botero-Montez, who does not shy away from vulgar theft in order to advance her own research, is harmless in comparison.

Daring explorers are called to unravel the mystery of the jade statuette, which was stolen from the property of the Horasian scholars. It is important to follow in the footsteps of a long forgotten culture. From the sunny city of Ht-Alem, the heroes have to travel to the island of Altoum and get closer to the forest people living there; they have to cross the impassable jungle on the banks of the Jalob River and ascend into the highlands of HRabaaal - and in the end even plunge into the unexplored depths dare to venture into the rain mountains. They may succeed in unraveling one of the best-kept secrets of the steaming jungle: the legendary city of Kuruke-Wape, which was lost thousands of years ago.
