Product Description

There is no peace and quiet on Farmer Bernd's farm, because the sly fox loves to scare the geese and chase them. But Hasso, the farm dog, keeps a watchful eye on his amusingly confused flock of geese. Before the goose hunt can begin, you are allowed to choose a set of cards of one colour. This set is shuffled well and placed face down. Five of these cards are then taken into your hand, the rest remain in front of you as a personal face-down draw pile. And off they go!

After the turn, everyone may discard a card from their hand. How you discard depends on the picture on the card: If you want to discard a goose or a dog, you do so in secret, i.e. face down. If the cheeky fox is chosen, it is placed face up and the scaring up of the geese can begin.

The person who placed the fox is allowed to flush out the geese until he or she decides to end the hunt or comes across Hasso. If the latter happens, the fox gets it and you are out of luck!

Because the turn ends immediately and you haven't caught a single goose, even if some geese were turned over to the others beforehand. Instead, all those who have one or more cards face up in front of them may put them on their own winning pile. Whoever has the most cards on their winning pile at the end is the winner.
