Product Description

Germany in the 1920s - a country trying to recover from a bloody world war and, still unaware of it, heading towards the second. Political tensions of a young democracy and the economy fluctuating into hitherto unseen ups and downs offer plenty of material for new scenarios.

In addition to the extensive source section, this volume contains new editions of three legendary adventures, for the first time for 7th Edition Cthulhu:

In Frozen Fear, the player characters are "thrown" into the middle of one of the titular bloody wars.

Bilderwahn connects the investigators ominously with people they did not know before and never wanted to know.

In Tempus fugit! on the other hand, the characters suddenly wake up in a forest clearing without initially being able to remember what they actually want here and who they are in the first place.

A reproduction of an original map of Germany from 1927 rounds off the volume as an insert.

Not suitable for children under 36 months.
