Product Description

The Tiger is a powerful German heavy tank that was used in the Second World War. It was developed in response to the successes of Soviet T-34 tanks and American Sherman tanks. The Tiger I was known for its very thick armour, which provided excellent protection against enemy missiles. Klemmbaustein-Tiger in the late Ausf version. It was modelled true to detail on a scale of 1:28. It has movable elements such as a turret and a cannon barrel as well as rotating wheels and tracks. It differs from other Tigers in our range due to the wheels, suspension and colours typical of this version from the end of the war. The sophisticated set consists of 1,207 elements and faithfully reflects the original shapes of its historical model. Our high-performance clamp-on brick armour features high-quality prints that won't wear off. Particularly noteworthy is the new, true-to-original colour scheme, which makes the model look stunning! The design of the tank has also changed. It is even better and more detailed. We have used a completely new drive wheel here. The structure of the turret is also completely different and is based on the original in detail, with the interior elements skilfully imitated. The set includes a miniature model of the Maybach engine, which can be displayed next to the model or placed in the tank under the service hatch. The model has movable wheels and chains consisting of many links. While having fun, you can drive the tank and watch the caterpillar drive work! The tank ammunition supplied can be stored inside the vehicle. The hatches can be opened and there is space underneath for standard COBI figures. The entire set is complemented by a black sign with the name and commander of Tiger 007 from Normandy printed on it. Build up the story brick by brick and complete your collection!

Panzerkampfwagen VI or Tiger is a German heavy tank from the Second World War. Its characteristic shape is still recognisable all over the world. The vehicle itself has become a legend and is still present not only in historical materials, but also in pop culture. The first Tiger units were delivered to the front near Leningrad and Tunisia in August/September 1942. Designed and manufactured by Henschel, the tank was very modern and effective. Unfortunately, its production required enormous resources of valuable raw materials and time. Tiger I and some Tiger II tanks had a significant impact on the course of hostilities. The infamous and fearsome Tigers destroyed over 10,300 Allied tanks and 11,380 guns, with their own losses totalling 1,725.
