Product Description

The WC 54 was a light truck developed during World War II. Produced in the years 1942 to 1945, it often served as a military ambulance for the US Army. The vehicles remained in use during the Korean War despite the appearance of a successor in the form of the WC 64. The WC 54 was still in service in European countries as late as the 1960s. Thanks to the RAM TRUCKS license, the block model takes on the legend of this iconic vehicle! Using a set of 293 COBI construction blocks you can build the most famous American military ambulance WC 54 in a 1:35 scale. All graphic details are compositions made of blocks and high-quality prints that do not wear off even during intensive use. We released the model with the highest accuracy under the RAM TRUCKS license! The design of the vehicle uniquely reflects the original shapes of its historical inspiration. The model continues a series of historic cars that were created using elements specially designed for this purpose. The set includes great multi-piece fenders, a block imitating a radiator, a windshield with printed wipers and many other useful elements. The WC 54 is simple in construction and perfect for modifications. More experienced builders can easily use the available elements to create other versions of cars or trucks!
