Brussels, 1893: Victor Horta designs the Maison Atrique and the Hôtel Tassel. Today, these two buildings are regarded as the first Art Nouveau buildings and are recognised throughout the world. Characteristic elements of Art Nouveau are light-flooded rooms, curved lines reminiscent of plants and flowers, iron, mosaics, frescoes and stained glass. In the same year, Paul Hankar also built his own Art Nouveau house. Brussels becomes the starting point of an artistic movement that soon spreads throughout Europe and inspires the great architects of the "golden age" of the Belle Époque. In Bruxelles 1893, you play these famous architects. You build magnificent houses, create decorative works of art and expand your influence with the help of the most noble aristocrats of the time. The big dream, however, is to complete your architectural masterpiece, which will be displayed on your personal scoreboard. At the end of the game, the player who has collected the most prestige - in the form of victory points (VP) - wins. Bruxelles 1893 was the 2014 winner of the AS D'OR in the "Experts" category. Now available as a completely revised new edition in German, including the Belle Époque expansion.
