Product Description

Tower Up The expansion of the city centre is in full swing. You are in charge of one of the companies tasked with building skyscrapers. However, there are clear guidelines: When you construct a new building, you must contribute to the construction of all directly neighbouring buildings. And that's not all! The city council also sets aesthetic requirements: Two neighbouring buildings must never be the same colour! As your company is not the only one working on the project, you can expect strong competition. To stay one step ahead of the others and win the game, you need to plan cleverly and give the competition as little room to manoeuvre as possible. Important information Caution! Not suitable for children under 36 months.
