Product Description

The Romans called it our sea (Mare Nostrum). This is because the Mediterranean was the inland sea of the Roman Empire. It was navigated by ships propelled by human muscles and sails. For centuries, galleys and liburins have glided majestically across the sea, keeping order! Build the Emperor's beautiful brick warship yourself and display it on the plinth! See how many details are included. Add colourful sails and rigging. The set contains three figures. Emperor Marcus Aurelius (Marcus Aurelius Antoninus), senator and Roman general, has lots of prints and details! There is also a legionary banner with a golden eagle on the ship. No army can function without it! Once built, the warship looks majestic and is sure to catch the eye of any onlooker! If standing on a shelf isn't what you expect from blocks, we have a solution for that! Attach more sets from the Roman Empire collection to the ship. Put together a team of Roman legionaries. Stage a battle with gladiator and barbarian figures and shoot at the ship with a catapult. The fun scenario depends only on your imagination!
