Product Description

Description Mixtour Tower building for the highest demands - it's all about the right distance. by Dieter Stein The aim of the game seems very simple: towers made up of at least 5 pieces with one of your own pieces at the top win the game! However, Dieter Stein has come up with something completely new. It is not the height of the moving tower that determines how far it can go, but only the target tower. Of course, this also means that pieces (towers) that are on the board may only jump onto other pieces (towers). A token is only placed on a free space when it is placed. Existing towers may also be split again. To add to the confusion, each player may move any tower, regardless of the colour of the topmost tile. Only to win, your own colour must form the top of the tower. Mixtour is a very demanding strategy game and a wonderful challenge for your own thought patterns. Caution! Not suitable for children under the age of three. Small parts can be swallowed. For 2 players aged 10 and over. Solid game board made of oiled beech, 25 cm x 20 cm. 5 pieces each in red and white, 5 counters for a tournament game.
