Product Description

Rincala family by Dieter Stein. The name Rincala already says a lot about the new game by Dieter Stein. The name contains Mancala and Ring. However, the author has turned the familiar hollows into stacks. These stacks are distributed continuously in a circle on each turn. If two stones of the same colour are on top of each other after distribution, the player receives the upper one. The aim is, of course, to get as many of the tiles as possible. There are a few additional rules for distributing the stacks and counting the points at the end. The result is another quickly explained game for all ages, for which a little thought is quite useful. Caution! Not suitable for children under the age of three. Small parts can be swallowed. For 2-3 players aged 6 and over. Game board made of solid beech, 20 x 20 cm, oiled. Wooden game pieces, lacquered, in 4 colours.
