Product Description

ConHex with connectors is a connecting game for two by Michail Antonow. It is not chance or luck, but superior strategy and cleverer tactics that lead to success. Each player has the goal of connecting two opposite sides of the board with an unbroken chain of squares of their colour. Player A wins when he has connected the top side with the bottom side, player B endeavours to connect the left side with the right side. A draw is not possible. In ConHex, however, squares are not simply occupied and thereby taken possession of, but each individual square must be conquered against the resistance of the other player. Only when a player has occupied the majority of the corner points of a square with their own connectors may they mark it with their colour. When placing each individual plug, it must be taken into account that each corner point has an effect on several playing fields. The continuous row of marked fields, not corner points, is decisive for victory. Caution! Not suitable for children under 3 years of age. Small parts can be swallowed! For 2 players from approx. 10 years. Material: Game board 30 x 30 cm, solid beech, oiled, 2 small wooden bowls for game pieces. Wooden markers: made of walnut and maple, 25 wooden plugs each, light and dark coloured.
