Product Description

The city is growing and has commissioned your companies to build underground lines to meet the increasing public transport needs of the various districts. You must plan your actions for the long term and use scarce resources cleverly to fulfil your own goals and those of the city; this brings prestige. Drive up market prices for the competition and skilfully use their stops to optimise your line. You build for three years, and whoever has gained the most prestige afterwards wins! Will your construction project pick up speed or will it end up on the railway sidings?
