Product Description

The Fokker D. VII aircraft model is a perfect opportunity to travel back in time to the First World War and feel the emotions associated with this legendary fighter aircraft. The Fokker D.VII was one of the best German aircraft of its time and was appreciated for its exceptional manoeuvrability and stability in the air. Its good firepower and exceptional manoeuvrability made it a dangerous opponent for Allied pilots. This aircraft became the symbol of the fearless pilot Rudolf Berthold - one of the most effective flying aces of the First World War, who destroyed 44 enemy aircraft despite being seriously wounded! The 1:32 scale model made from COBI building blocks faithfully reproduces this historic aircraft and offers interactive fun thanks to moving elements such as propellers, wheels and ailerons. Perfect printing on the blocks reproduces the historical markings of the Fokker D.VII, and the absence of stickers ensures the durability and high quality of the model. Thanks to its solid construction, the model is suitable for both play and display. The set also includes a figure of Rudolf Berthold, reflecting his uniform and characteristic appearance. We can place the pilot in the cockpit of the aeroplane next to two machine guns. The whole thing is complemented by a brick with the aircraft's name printed on it, which emphasises the uniqueness of this collector's model. Thanks to COBI building blocks, the aviation history of the First World War comes to life in modern form. This is the perfect model for any history, aviation and military enthusiast, sure to become the centrepiece of any collection and sure to attract attention thanks to its details and precise workmanship.
