Product Description

There's a lot of confusion on the building site. Little ones aged 2 and up should help to find the right building materials. In this activity game "We're playing building site", children learn how to build a house step by step and find out what work and materials are needed. The adults support the children by explaining and naming the construction work, building materials and vehicles after the six construction steps. Build a road network, fill lorries with building materials and drive them to the correct construction site: By matching and discovering the colourful world of construction sites, children learn about everyday knowledge and colours through play. By puzzling the road network between the building sites, children also train their fine motor skills. Depending on the developmental stage of the children, initially only three, and later all the building sites can be supplied. For older children, game variations with initial rules are possible and the colour cube is used. Like all games in the "Playful First Learning" series, "We play building site" is designed for early childhood exploration. All games in this series are equipped with optimally suited materials and support the great learning potential of the little ones.
