Product Description

The G version was the most produced variant of the Pzkw V Panther and replaced the A version in production from 1944. The chassis had been designed more favourably and further improvements were continuously incorporated into production. Vehicles of the final version featured, among other things, a modified engine deck and a modified roller cover. With its 7.5 cm 42L/70 gun and bullet-resistant moulds, the Panther proved to be a dangerous opponent. The V-12-cylinder Maybach HL 230P30 petrol engine with a maximum output of 700 hp enabled the 44,800 kg Panther Ausf. G to reach a top speed of up to 55 km/h. The crew consisted of five men.
